

The conflict between Palestine & Israel

Palestinians and Israelis have spent more than 50 years in constant wars for possession and control of Palestinian territory. Both sides have had fatalities and violent attacks. It all started in the Second World War, when Holocaust survivors had nowhere to go because no one wanted them. The British, who controlled Palestine at that time, decided to settle them there. And in this way a new territory was created that would be called Israel. The problem came when the Israelis began to occupy all the land of Palestine, with the consequence that Palestine is practically disappearing. So the Palestinians have nowhere to go and there is a wall that separates them.

I can understand the point of view of both sides. It's unfair that the Israelites took over all of Palestine and that Israelis live in better conditions than they do. I also think that it is horrible that the Palestinians are not allowed to pass the wall freely and that the Israelis make the same mistakes of the past.

On the other hand, I understand that the Jews occupied that land because they had passed a war where 6 million people on their side was killed, so they didn't know where to go. Most likely, after that dreadful war, the Israelis had a lust for power and took advantage of the opportunity to occupy a territory that was not theirs.

As far as I'm concerned, my solution would be for the two sides to live in the same place without any worries because after all they both want the same thing.
